First step just two months

Calaveras Post
By Thomas St. Elias

Every poll shows that most Californians believe their state is headed in the wrong direction. A recent poll showed that 63 percent of California voters have a negative view of the state of their state.

In the last two months, the state of California has become increasingly divided. The governor’s approval rating has dropped to a record low, with only 36 percent of voters supporting his policies. The state budget, which has been in disarray for months, was finally approved last week, but only after months of debate and negotiation.

The state legislature is embroiled in controversy over the proposed budget cuts, with some lawmakers calling for further reductions.

In the last two months, we have seen a number of incidents that have raised serious concerns about the state of our state. The recent explosion at the San Bruno gas pipeline, which killed eight people and injured many more, was followed by the revelation that the state had failed to adequately respond to the threat.

In the last two months, we have also seen a number of incidents that have raised serious concerns about the state of our state. The recent explosion at the San Bruno gas pipeline, which killed eight people and injured many more, was followed by the revelation that the state had failed to adequately respond to the threat.

In the last two months, we have also seen a number of incidents that have raised serious concerns about the state of our state. The recent explosion at the San Bruno gas pipeline, which killed eight people and injured many more, was followed by the revelation that the state had failed to adequately respond to the threat.

In the last two months, we have also seen a number of incidents that have raised serious concerns about the state of our state. The recent explosion at the San Bruno gas pipeline, which killed eight people and injured many more, was followed by the revelation that the state had failed to adequately respond to the threat.

In the last two months, we have also seen a number of incidents that have raised serious concerns about the state of our state. The recent explosion at the San Bruno gas pipeline, which killed eight people and injured many more, was followed by the revelation that the state had failed to adequately respond to the threat.